Winemaking	Harvesting of the grapes is made at technological maturation when they have accumulated in the peel grape over 220 g/L sugars. Hand-picked grapes are sorted and transported to the cellar in containers, after ensuring antioxidant protection. After reception and crushing, the must is being seeding with selected yeast which produce fermentation at controlled temperature. Wine maturation is made in stainless steel tanks and deposition, storage and conditioning are made at a temperature of maximum 12 °C, avoiding contact with air. The wine is then bottled and kept for aging on bottle for at least one year.
